

Chinese Go 中国围棋

Chinese Go is also known as “Weiqi”.

It's an ancient board game.

People all over the world are interested in Go matches.

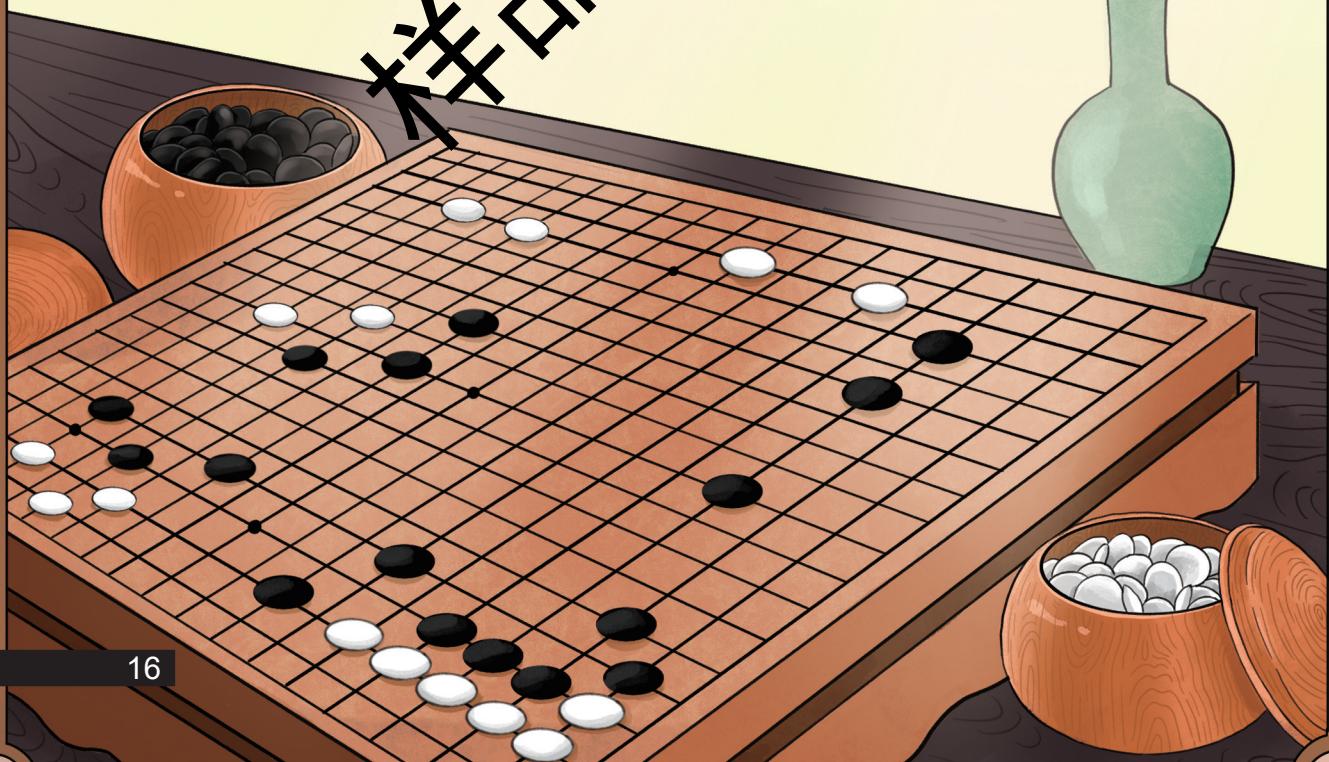

I have a Go board. There are  $19 \times 19$  grid lines (网格线).

So there are 361 crosses (交叉点) on the board.

I have 181 black stones and 180 white stones in total.

The stones are round and smooth.

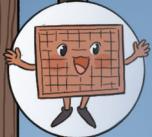

Let's play!

Place stone pieces on the Go board.

The black stone moves first, then the white.

Players take turns (轮流) to place the stones.

They try to control (掌控、占据) more territory (地盘) to win the game.

My board is like the square field under the moon.

In the black and white world, the players fight in silence. They show their strategy (策略), patience (耐心) and foresight (远见) in the game.

Long long ago, the wise King Yao (尧) invented the game for his son Dan Zhu (丹朱). At first, Dan Zhu was very naughty and always fought outside. But when he played Go, he loved it very much and played it every day. He thought about the wisdom of it. He understood the value of calm thinking by playing Go. Finally, he became better and better!

Besides Dan Zhu, there were also many famous people in ancient China, like Wang Xizhi and Huang Longshi, who played Go extremely well.
